

Laura Mills, Amnesty International

Laura Mills is a researcher at Amnesty International focusing on older people and people with disabilities in armed conflict and emergency situations. At Amnesty International, she has extensively documented the situation of older people and people with disabilities during and after armed conflict, including in Armenia, Azerbaijan, and Ukraine. Before joining Amnesty International, she was a researcher at Human Rights Watch, where she worked on civil and political rights, disability rights, older person's rights, and health across many countries. From 2012 to 2018, she was a foreign correspondent for The Associated Press and The Wall Street Journal, based in Moscow and Kyiv. She covered the 2014 war in eastern Ukraine, the annexation of Crimea, protest movements in Russia and Ukraine, and other breaking news in the former Soviet Union. She graduated from Columbia University. She speaks Russian and some Ukrainian.

Elena Saenz Director of Programmes and Advocacy at Global Fund for Widows